Story

What we're trying to solve:

For many Muslims in the West, faith is a central part of life. A Pew Research Center study (2023–2024) found that 60% of U.S. Muslim adults consider religion "very important." Yet the realities of balancing work, family, and personal responsibilities often make acts of worship challenging to maintain, and striving for spiritual excellence even more so. Limited time, scarce resources, and emotional or physical exhaustion are all variables that impact consistent engagement in faith-based practices, which are essential for deepening spiritual connection, building resilience, and fostering a sense of purpose in daily life.

Research shows that for young Muslims, these challenges can feel even heavier. Many struggle with feelings of inadequacy or shame over their religious shortcomings, especially in secular environments where Islam is less visible. Without consistent ways to engage in acts of worship, it is easy to feel spiritually disconnected, discouraged, and emotionally burnt out. Evidently, this points to a clear need for practical tools and structured support that help Muslims integrate faith into their daily lives with greater ease.

The question then becomes: how can we make Allah's presence tangible in daily life and support consistent spiritual development?

How we're trying to solve it:

The Prophet ﷺ taught us that after the obligatory acts, nothing brings a servant closer to Allah than voluntary deeds (Hadith Qudsi, Bukhari). These nawāfil practices not only compensate for our shortcomings in obligatory worship but also strengthen our connection to Allah, drawing His love, mercy, and protection. Yet many Muslims struggle to sustain them in the midst of busy, modern lives.

The Ihsan App was built to address this need. It is not just another Islamic knowledge app, it is a practical tool designed to transform knowledge into action and bring faith alive in daily routines.

Our team has carefully identified the wide range of voluntary acts recommended in Islam and woven them into a unique digital experience that makes practicing them accessible and consistent. With features like:

- GPS-enabled reminders & personalized alarms for acts like Tahajjud, Qiyam, Salatul Duha, Dua for entering your House, Masjid, and Mall etc.
- Delivering contextual notifications for dua and dhikr based on real-time moments, locations, or situations –When events such as rain occur, a notification with a dua suggestion is sent to the user, guiding their thinking to naturally shift from “Oh, it’s raining” to “Oh, Allah sent this rain as a mercy, and now I have an increased opportunity for my duas to be accepted”
- Tasbih tracking with analytics, turning remembrance into measurable progress and motivation.
- Comprehensive guidance for all acts of worship, offering users the virtues and benefits of each recommended practice, clear instructions on how to perform them, and a habit-tracking system to help translate intention into action

In short, the Ihsan App bridges the gap between intention and action, helping users effortlessly observe beneficial voluntary acts of worship, or “times of excellence,” within the flow of everyday life.

Where we are now:

We’re right at the finish line! After nearly two years of dedicated work, the Ihsan App is nearly complete. Guided by a growing team of over 10+ youth-led volunteers committed to bringing this mission to life, the app has been carefully built, tested, and refined. Ihsan is also a registered and incorporated nonprofit in Canada, and the app will be completely free for all users, with no advertisements. It is designed to serve as a means of sadaqah jariyah, allowing supporters to share in ongoing rewards as the community benefits from its use.

Our preliminary research has demonstrated strong interest and demand for the app. With over 100 responses to our initial survey, 43% of candidates, ages 18-35, identified dua as their primary means of connecting with Allah and 50% had the willingness to implement more voluntary acts in their daily life. We also conducted a social media experiment testing participation in shared reminder initiatives, which engaged a growing group of 100+ participants from across Canada (shown below). These findings highlight significant community enthusiasm and a clear need for this solution. Through Ihsan, we hope to strengthen the individual units of our community until our Ummah, as a whole, is unshakeable.

With the generous support of our community and early investors, we have already raised $4.5K, but there is still a long way to go and funding is required to successfully launch, operate, and sustain both the application and our startup. With your support, we can bring Ihsan to life!

Risks and challenges

1. Financial Sustainability

As a nonprofit organization, Ihsan has no paid features or monetization strategy by design, in order to maintain accessibility for all users.

This creates a dependency on external funding (donations, grants, sponsorships) to cover ongoing development, hosting, and maintenance costs.

Without securing sufficient funding, there is a risk that two years of development efforts could be lost, and the app may not be able to continue operating post-launch.

2. Reliance on Sustainers

The long-term success of Ihsan depends on establishing a consistent base of sustainers—individuals and organizations who are willing to contribute regularly.

Failure to cultivate this supporter base could result in financial instability and inability to scale or improve the platform.

3. Opportunity Cost of Non-Monetization

By foregoing traditional revenue models such as subscription fees or in-app purchases, Ihsan is forgoing potential self-sustaining revenue streams. While this aligns with the mission of maximizing accessibility, it heightens reliance on external donors to keep the app operational.

Long-lasting design

The app is built with scalability and durability in mind. Rather than being a short-term campaign tool, Ihsan is designed to remain useful over the long run by continuously providing Muslims with daily reminders, contextual duas, and acts of worship.

The content and functionality are evergreen—meaning they won't expire or become irrelevant quickly—ensuring that development resources invested today continue to have an impact for years.

Reusability and recyclability

Core features and content modules (e.g. reminders, duas, acts of worship) can be adapted and repurposed across multiple contexts and campaigns, reducing the need for redundant redevelopment.

Educational and spiritual resources shared on the platform can be “reused” by users themselves—passed on, taught to others, or applied in different life situations—multiplying impact without additional material costs.

Sustainable materials

As a digital product, Ihsan eliminates the need for physical materials (e.g. printed books, pamphlets, or reminder cards), thereby reducing paper consumption, ink usage, and related waste.

The choice to deliver content digitally is itself a sustainable material decision—prioritizing data and cloud infrastructure over consumable, physical resources

Sustainable Distribution

The app can be distributed globally through app stores with no incremental environmental cost per user. Unlike shipping physical goods, distribution has near-zero marginal environmental impact.

Updates and improvements are delivered electronically, avoiding packaging, shipping, and manufacturing emissions.

By centralizing spiritual reminders into one app, Ihsan reduces the need for fragmented physical alternatives, supporting a lighter environmental footprint.
