Story

My project

Refutal is a free political debate and discussion platform. It's free for users to participate in debates, and free to run your own basic guild of up to 30 members. Users who wish to expand their guild's member base or want to experience every feature we plan to offer can upgrade for a low monthly rate.

The project team behind Refutal has grown more and more frustrated with today's social media and technology in general. Everywhere you look, from Facebook to Twitter to Google platforms and Discord, the ADL has partnered or invested, and fundamentally changed the rules for what can and cannot be discussed. Companies like Blizzard, Riot Games, and others have taken principal investments from the Chinese company Tencent and similarly limited the capacity for free speech.

And we're sick of it!

Refutal seeks to change this paradigm by offering a true free speech platform for political debate. We want to offer a platform for everyone to speak their mind no matter how controversial or politically upsetting their opinions may be. (See: The Hong-Kongtroversy regarding Grandmaster Hearthstone player, "Chung Ng Wai" being banned for advocating democracy in Hong-Kong).

My plan

We have set up our website and are working diligently to create a beta version of the client by the end of December of this year; complete with competitive and unique features, such as political profiling; our custom AI-moderation bots and command bots for server owners.

Rewards

The reward we offer right now is a server plan equal to the amount more rewards to follow as they become available.

Risks and challenges

We aim to have a beta client ready by December of this year; the date of rewards is naturally contingent on the date we can get the beta live.

We hope to offer a sleek, intuitive, and modern design for our client, but you can't please everyone all of the time. You might think the client looks ugly.

It's a chat program. There aren't a lot of risks.

Long-lasting design

Will last forever barring a quantum time vortex sucking us into a parallel dimension where y2k actually happened.

Something else

It's software. Excluding the miniscule amount of entropy generated from the effort of typing out code and advertising, the impact on the environment or thermodynamic equilibrium is negligible to non-existent.
