Story

There is a growing concern that is affecting our children and the generations that will follow. They seem to be swimming toward a dark cloud of blissful ignorance. Ignorance that doesn't allow them to explore a vital aspect of their mind, and that aspect is their imagination. Many of our children today are focusing much, if not all; of their attention on things that are diverting their minds from what is essential for human beings to reach the next level of the social evolution. Being able to explore your imagination and bring those visions to life if the single entity that allows humans to remain at the pinnacle of all living creatures. However this vary ability is being taken for granted and neglected. And like all things neglected eventually they become too dull to be of any use and effectiveness. Our future generations are fast moving to a society that is solely governed on animalistic desire rather than reason and contemplation. In this plan we will explain not only the issues but also unique solutions for those issue. How you many wonder; well simple put "writing" or more specifically "Collective Writing." The projects name is TalePrints, and to understand this vision you will have to use your Imagination.

What is TalePrints.com and how it works briefly?

Like we mentioned in the introduction, there is a growing issue with our future generation not maximizing their imaginations full potential. One of the major issues contributing to this problem is lack of interest in writing and reading in our youth. Children are constantly be bombarded with movies, games and superficial media that, although they are imaginative, ironically they are the main culprits adding to this unwanted phenomenon. TalePrints.com is a new computer program that will work with schools to get children to utilize their inner minds and train it to extract the wonders they could conjure up with just contemplation. As an example and to simplify its explanation, let us imagine a classroom or thirty children aged between 11 and 12 years. We then break down these children into six groups of five children per group. Then, each of these groups will have to choose a leader (the preferred way), or a teacher can appoint one. The chosen leader will then have the task of beginning a story and ensuring that the others in the group don't stray to far from the leaders main vision (of course, there are rules and limitation to the leaders control and power). Once the leader has started the story each group member will follow suit and add to the story but they to will have rules and limitations to follow. At the end of a specified time period the stories will then be complete, edited and printed. Parents will then be giving the option to buy these books for themselves thus ensuring the survival of this project for future generations. That is just a simple explanation of this project, and we are confident of its success but just in case, we have other enticing features to further capture their imaginations and channel them toward a competitive style of this exercise.

Risks and challenges

The only challenges that we could potentially see is with the publishing companies that we use to print the books out for us. However this is a minor issue that could easily be solved should it arise.
